PORTSMOUTH ELKS CELEBRATE BIRTH OF OLD GLORY

With Parade and Speechmaking--Governor Felker, Mayor Badger and Captain C. C. Rogers, U. S. N., Pay Fitting Tribute to the Stars and Stripes at Playgrounds Before a Large Audience.

Local weather conditions favored Flag Day observance under the auspices of Portsmouth Lodge No. 97, B. P. O. E. and the arrangements as planned by the members of this bustling order were carried out with out a hitch.

When the affair was first planned by the Elks, those in charge had no idea that it would assume the proportions of today's celebration.

Portsmouth is a loyal city in the full sense of the word and when the plans of the local Elks were unfolded our citizens and business men entered heartily into the spirit of co-operation which resulted in today's successful observance.

When the committee representing Portsmouth Lodge called upon Captain Rogers, the Commandant of the navy and Captain Glasgow, in charge of the Portsmouth artillery district, both of these officials also volunteered to do all in their power to assist in properly observing the event, and their kindly assistance contributed largely to one of the largest and finest processions seen in this city for some time.

The members of the arrangement committee did not wait for today, but got busy on Friday and distributed 5000 flags among the adults and children of this city.

Our business men and citizens were not slow in showing their patriotism and flags are displayed more generally about the city than on any previous occasion.

An invitation was extended to Governor Samuel Felker to be present and it was accepted. He and his party arrived at 10.45 o'clock and on their arrival were met at the Boston and Maine railroad station by the reception committee of the Portsmouth Lodge, consisting of Mayor Badger, Wallace Hackett, Gustave Peyser, and Charles R. Shillaber. Automobiles were boarded and the party were taken to the Portsmouth navy yard for a brief inspection of the big naval plant.

At the navy yard after the interchange of greetings was over between the members of the gubernatorial party and Captain Rogers and the officers of the yard, the commandant and the officers commanding the various ships together with Captain Glasgow, U. S. A., were brought to the Rockingham where luncheon was served.

At 2 o'clock the procession was formed on Pleasant street with Chairman James A. McCarthy as chief marshal. The order of procession was as follows:

Only a few more special $2.00 Chamberlay Dresses at $1.50. Sizes 34 to 46.

MOTOR CYCLE CRASHES INTO CARRIAGE

Henry Marcous Is Severely Injured in Collision on Woodbury Avenue.

Henry Marcous, a blacksmith employed by the Boston & Maine rail road was badly injured on Woodbury avenue near the residence of Thomas Flynn.

The story is that Marcous at a rapid speed crashed into the rear of a buggy containing Lewis Harrison and another man named Lunt. The carriage and motorcycle were badly wrecked and Marcous severely cut and bruised about the head and face. Harrison and Lunt were thrown out on the side of the highway but escaped with slight bruises. It is said the machine failed to work properly and Marcous was unable to check the speed and the crash came in a few seconds after he observed the vehicle moving ahead of him.

MURDERED HIS SWEETHEART AND KILLED HIMSELF

Robert White, a Wireless Operator, Jealous of Jennie Wade, Follows Her in an Automobile and Takes Her Life on South Street--Her Escorts, Bernard and Oscar White, Escaped Uninjured.

Crazed with jealousy, Robert White, chief electrician of the wireless station at the navy yard, shot and killed Jennie Wade, 16, on South St., at the head of Wilder street shortly before 10.30 Friday evening, and then turned the gun on himself and committed suicide. He died instantly and the girl died on the way to the hospital.

Two young men who were with Miss Wade at the time of the shooting, Bernard and Oscar White, were not injured, both running away when White appeared with the gun. They are no relation to the slayer of Miss Wade.

That White contemplated his crime is shown by the following letter that he left with a friend:

U. S. NAVAL RADIO STATION

Portsmouth, N. H., June 12, 1913.

To My Friends—I deeply regret the necessity of this act which was caused by the pangs of a broken heart.

Every effort was made toward a reconciliation by me, and failing in this I felt that death was preferable to torment.

The young lady's name is Jennie Wade; kindly notify her father, address Lafayette road.

In my case, have my body prepared for burial at the Naval Hospital, and notify Albert E. Johnson, 115 Concord street, Baltimore, Md.

With best wishes, and better luck to all who knew me.

ROBERT S. WHITE.

The crime was deliberate, for Robert White had trailed his sweetheart and her escort from Chestnut street to where she was shot in an automobile, after first getting, his revolver and aiming himself with brass bullets.

The slayer has been keeping company with Miss Wade for some time and he was greatly infatuated with her. Last week they had some disagreement, but this was made up on Thursday evening, when White visited the girl and took her to the pictures. She stated that she was not going to be out Friday evening, but remain at home. She lives with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Wade on Lafayette road, and Friday evening did come down town. White, it appeared, saw her go into the Portsmouth theatre with the White brothers, Oscar and Bernard, who met her by chance near the theatre and sat with her. Robert White entered the hall and took a seat in the rear watching the girl for a time, but he finally went out and secured his revolver and then came back and waited.

When the performance was over Miss Wade came out and with her escort started to walk home. White then hired a public automobile driven by Eugene Hutchins, which was standing in front of the DeWitt hotel. He told Hutchins to keep the people ahead pointing to Miss Wade and the two young men. In sight, and Hutchins followed them up Middle street, down Richards avenue and out South street. The girl and her escort walked slowly and it was necessary to run by them once or twice. Just after they passed the head of Wilder street White ordered Hutchins to run ahead and stop and he did, and the minute the car stopped he jumped from it and ran out in front of the girl. With the words, "You have had a blue walk" he began shooting, the girl dropping with a groan at the first shot, and the two young men with her jumped to one side and ran down the street.

White fired five shots, but only two took effect, the one that pierced the heart of his girl and the shot that he sent into his own brain.

The shots alarmed the entire neighborhood and Hutchins who had jumped from the car, when White began firing, ran up to him as he dropped. The girl was then breathing so he ran to the house of Harry R. Philbrook and telephoned to the police station and informed Captain Burke and then called Dr. Pender. The physician told him to bring the girl to his office and Hutchins with the aid of Mr. Philbrook and his brother, lifted the girl into the automobile and rushed to Dr. Pender's office and he seeing the girl was unconscious ordered her to the hospital. She was taken into the hospital but was dead when placed on the operating table.

In the meanwhile Captain Burke had sent officers Murphy and McCaffery to the scene in an automobile. Hutchins message was that the shooting had taken place in a machine at the corner of Wilder and Middle street instead of South, but the officers continued on. Officer Anderson who was on Middle street, soon after joined them and Asst. Marshal Duckert who saw the officers tear up the street in an automobile, followed in another, and took charge. He notified Medical Referee A. R. Sherburne.

When the officers arrived they found White's body where he had dropped, with the revolver near where it had fallen from his hand. He had died instantly and there was nothing to do but await the arrival of the Medical Referee, who after viewing the body, turned it over to Undertaker Ham. Dr. Sherburne also viewed the body of the girl at the hospital and this was also taken to Undertaker Ham's morgue.

Bernard and Oscar White, who were with Miss Wade when she was killed, returned to the scene of the shooting and afterwards reported at the police station.

Bernard stated that he and his brother were going into the theatre when they met Miss Wade and being acquainted purchased her ticket for her and sat with her during the performance.

A CHANGE IN AMERICAN POLO TEAM

New York, June 13. (Herald Staff.)—The American polo team will play at No. 1 and Lawrence Waterbury will play at No. 2 in tomorrow's second game for the national polo cup on the field of the Meadow Brook Club at Westbury, L. I. It is expected that this will be the only change in the lineup of the British and American teams. The decision to place Stoddard at No. 1 was reached only after a discussion of every angle of the situation and it meets with the approval of the American committee, although there was a considerable divergence of views as to the best way of meeting the situation created by the injury to J. M. Waterbury, Jr.

Stoddard has generally played the forward position and is a player of unquestionable ability. Perhaps the criticism may be made that he is too individual in his play and is apt to disregard orders in the excitement of a close contest. If this should happen in tomorrow's game the consequences might not be so serious with Lawrence Waterbury behind him ready to meet any emergency. In the practice on the third Meadow Brook field yesterday afternoon Stoddard had a long session, being coached in his strokes and in combination play.

Captain Risson, leader of the British force, said today that there would be no changes in the lineup of the challengers. The possibilities of the situation already have been canvassed and it would appear that only some unforeseen event will change the plans in both camps.

The ponies have come along in fine shape and will be as fit tomorrow as on Tuesday. Larry Fitzpatrick, the American trainer, said this morning that his charges are in first-class condition. George Naylor, trainer for the duke of Westminster, stated that the British mounts will have only walking exercise today and that he is perfectly satisfied with their condition. None of the players will practice today.

The demand for seats continues unabated, although the Polo Association has no more to dispose of and has been obliged to turn away hundreds of applicants. Some of the excited ladies have found their way into the hands of speculation and are being held at high prices. As high as $15 each has been demanded for single seats in the front stand. Many will be obliged to pay the admission charge and take a chance of getting a glimpse of the game and it is feared that this will result in congestion of the grounds.

A GREAT DEMONSTRATION

Germans in the United States Will Celebrate Emperor's Quarter of a Century Reign

New York, June 13. (Herald Staff.)—What is to be the greatest demonstration in America to honor the ruler of a foreign country will occur tomorrow when Germans throughout the United States and Canada will celebrate the 25th anniversary of the accession of Kaiser Wilhelm II, Emperor of Germany. The demonstration also will be a demonstration in honor of the twenty-five years of peace Germany has endured under the rule of the Kaiser's War Lord. The committee in charge of the local celebration announced today that a huge fund had been subscribed throughout the United States as a memorial fund, which will be the express request of Kaiser Wilhelm, he devoted to philanthropic purposes in the respective cities in which it has been subscribed. An engrossed address signed by every contributor, in the Kaiser Memorial fund, no matter how small the subscription, today is ready to be sent to Germany for presentation to the Emperor.

The Imperial German Ambassador, Count von Bernstorff, who has acted as honorary chairman of the American committee is expected to come to New York tomorrow to attend the ceremonies here. Several representatives of foreign governments at Washington also have accepted invitations to attend. It was announced here today that formal programs to celebrate the event have been arranged in hundreds of municipalities throughout the country. Besides the engrossed address, several German societies have planned to send separate testimonials. San Francisco Germans today sent, by way of New York a handsome piece of bronze an silver sculpture, emblematic of California and the opening of the Panama canal. In the center is an arch above the Golden Gate across which two Neptune's represent the Atlantic and Pacific oceans above land and sea. Below the arch is the seal of California and the figures of a miner, a cowboy and an American Indian. At the bottom are fruits and flowers of California. The piece is mounted on a massive pedestal of California redwood.

CONCORD LETTER

Concord, June 14. (Herald Staff.)—In the state capital, there has been a rather quiet week, largely due to the progress of the fair at duty of the New Hampshire National Guard over in Belknap and Stafford counties. The reconstruction of what was the Concord road to mean to the city in the way of both business and fun has caused many a regretful sigh but not even those who have the greatest longing for the glories of Governor's Day of old and the most vivid remembrance of its glitter and pomp can deny that the present arrangement is much better for the guardsmen both in the experience of summing the actual army life which it gives them and in the absence of some of the features that at times discredit the camps across the river here.

Governor Feltner and his council looked over on Thursday the proposed routes for the new state road from Manchester to Portsmouth, and on Friday took part in the National Guard review at Rochester. At this writing it is not known here whether or not on this trip the breach in the ranks was healed which has developed in the adjustment of the legislature, the governor and two of his council on one side. This division has been largely responsible for the small number of appointments thus far made by the executive committee. Annual meetings last week in this city were those of the New Hampshire Bankers' Association and the New Hampshire Bible Society. The bankers enjoyed an outing at the famous Snowdon Club and a formal dinner at the Eagle hotel, with an address by E. M. Farnsworth of New York, secretary of the American Bankers' Association. More than 100 of the solid men of the state were present, representing a good many millions of dollars. Arthur M. Heard, of Manchester was elected president.

At the Bible Society meeting the chair was occupied by the president, the venerable Judge David Cross of Manchester, now in his 96th year, but the late John Kimball 92 was missed from behind the books of the presence, which for so many years had been one of the special things with which he charmed his remarkable mind. Appropriate resolutions upon his death were adopted by the society. More than 1000 men and women are now under treatment at the state hospital for the insane in this city, the concentration of the number because from all the counties of the state having been completed by recent transfers here from the institutions at Brentwood and Grassmere. The magnitude of the local plant and the efficiency of its operation are made plain to those who become acquainted with them for the first time. The importance of having on the new state board of control some member who is thoroughly acquainted with the needs of the state hospital is generally understood that much sentiment is manifested in favor of the appointment of Mrs. C. D. Bancroft, wife of the superintendent of the institution, a choice which would fill this requirement and at the same time meet the request of the state federation of Women's Clubs for the appointment of a woman on the board. The governor's nomination which the council refused to confirm, of Representative Benjamin W. Couch, as a member of the board would have given that body the necessary knowledge as to the state hospital, Judge Couch having been a member of its board of trustees for a number of years.

Associate Justice George H. Blinham of the supreme court, who was recently appointed as a justice of the United States Circuit Court for the first judicial district, has tendered his resignation to Governor Feltner, to

Joe Wood, Boston's Star Twirler Showing Poor Form

Boston, June 14. (Herald Staff.)—One of the big disappointments of the baseball season is the poor showing of Sunday Joe Wood, the Red Sox star twirler. Wood has not twirled the same brand of ball that he did last year. It is said that he is having trouble with his delivery. Last year it was Wood's pitching that materially aided Boston in capturing the pennant and later the world's series. So far this year he has not twirled anything like the ball he did in 1912. In fact, it may be stated that the only Boston pitcher who has been delivering consistently good ball this season is Buck O'Brien.

ELSIE MAC LEOD
Miss MacLeod is one of the loveliest of fair damozels who have contributed so much to the popularity of Edison pictures. Her first stage appearance was at the age of five. And it has fascinated and held her ever since. For seven years she appeared in vaudeville and later scored in "Lash, the Foreman."

Her experience in motion pictures dates back to 1910. Always charming "on and off" Miss MacLeod has made a host of friends. Her most notable triumphs were in "A Reluctant Cinderella," "The Dean's Daughter," "A Shower of Silencers," and "Marjorie Diamond Ring." Her characteristic damozels who have contributed long be remembered as one of the most delightful portrayals in pictures.

SCHOOL HOUSE MODELS BY PARCEL POST

Washington, June 12. (Herald Staff.)—Models of one, two and four-room schoolhouses by parcel post is the newest feature adopted by the United States Bureau of Education. The schoolhouse models are intended for structures in small communities. They are of cardboard, architecturally correct and altogether complete in hygienic detail. Already a number have been sent to points in the West and Southwest, where the erection of schoolhouses is contemplated.

The models were designed by Dr. F. B. Dresslar, the Bureau's specialist in school hygiene. When Dr. Dresslar had completed the plans on which the models are based, they were gone over carefully by two well-known firms of architects that make a specialty of schoolhouse construction. The models, correctly drawn to scale, give construction work in detail and information about cost.

"It is believed that these models," said an official of the bureau today, "will be of great assistance to school authorities in small rural communities who cannot afford to engage a school architect, and yet who are ambitious to have their schoolhouses up to date in every particular."

Dr. Dresslar asserted that any carpenter could construct a building with no other than the working plans.

At that time I was in a bad way as the result of kidney trouble, and though I had repeatedly tried remedies to get relief, my efforts were in vain. When Doan's Kidney Pills came to my attention, I procured a supply at Philbrick's Drug Store and began using them as directed. COME WITH FAMILY IN JULY

Washington, June 13.—President Wilson personally will conduct Mrs. Wilson and their daughters to their summer residence at Cornish, N. H., was made known today, provided Congress is not in session. The trip will be made early next month, and it is expected that Congress, when it adjourns over the Fourth of July, will take a recess, probably from Wednesday to the following Monday, the National holiday falling on Friday this year.

This would give the President ample time to see that his family is settled in the summer home and return in time for the resumption of the session.

To friends the President has let it be known that he has made up his mind to remain in the Capital during practically the entire heated term. While disliking the enforced separation from his family, Mr. Wilson is quoted as saying that he had no fear of heat, and did not suffer under it, so that personally his compulsory presence here would not entail any great hardship.

WHERE IS YOUR FAVORITE LOCATION FOR THE NEW ARMORY BUILDING?

Since the appropriation for the new armory has been allowed by the legislature, there appears to be much discussion as to where the home of the militia will be located. To get the idea of the most favorable site, the HERALD invites the people to vote on the matter and will print each day the following coupon, which can be filled out and sent to the City Editor. In due time the result will be published.

vy concluded a three-day session here yesterday, adjourning to meet here again two years hence. A resolution was adopted recommending to the secretaries of the army and navy the erection of chapels at all military posts. At present religious services are not held in any regular hall. The suggestion of Secretary Daniels that the naval chaplains organize among Catholics enlisted men such societies as the Total Abstinence and the Holy Name was adopted. Discussion developed an almost unanimous sentiment for Catholic chaplains being allowed to wear the clerical garb of Catholic priests instead of the uniform. The Congress went on record in testifying to the high character of army and navy officers and their cooperation in the work of the chaplains.

MARTIAL LAW
DECLARED OFF

Charlestown, W. Va., June 13.—Determined upon a speedy termination of its investigation of the West Virginia coal strike, the United States Senate subcommittee, sitting here today, planned to divide the inquiry into at least two parts.

While the bulk of the committee took testimony as to general conditions in the strike zone, Senator Borah planned to conclude his portion of the investigation into the charges that "citizens had been tried and convicted in violation of the Constitution and laws" by the examination of Ex-Gov. William B. Glasscock.

In the strike district conditions returned to normal legally today, following the proclamation last night of Gov. Hatfield ending martial law and withdrawing the few soldiers in the field.

The proposition of dividing the inquiry and allowing the senators in charge of the various divisions of the investigation to proceed individually to examine witnesses encountered strong opposition from the attorneys representing the mine operators, who took the position that they could not maintain their case before more than one committee at a time.

Gov. Hatfield's letter declining to furnish the committee with the records of cases tried before the last military commission was discussed by the committee today and, while no formal action was taken, the committee was practically agreed that no further action should be taken toward demanding that the Governor produce the records.

Yesterday's visit to Cabin and Point Creeks, the heart of the mine district, convinced the committee that conditions in the strike districts are now practically settled, and Chairman Swanson declared that an effort would be made to conclude the hearing as soon as possible.

Ex-Gov. Glasscock was on hand when the committee began today's hearings. Atty. Gen. Lilly and Judge Advocate Gen. Wallace took charge of the State's case.

Mr. Thomas B. Davis denied that he had ever interfered with the miners getting their mail.

"We had to keep those men from crowding around the railroad station, and we made them disperse," he said, "but no one who said he was going for mail was interfered with."

Mr. Davis said he imposed $250 in fines on miners at Parkdale and sentenced miners who were unable to pay fines to work under guards.

"Most of these men I found were working miners, not strikers, who were bringing whiskey into the martial law zone," said Mr. Davis. He said that no martial of the provost court he had been instructed to try minor offenders.

JAPAN DOES NOT WANT ANY TROUBLE

Tokio, Japan, June 13.—The Premier, Count Gombel Lamamoto in the course of an address to an assemblage of Japanese journalists today declared that he deeply regretted the controversy over the question of the Californian alien land ownership legislation is still unsettled.

The steps being taken by the Government, the Premier added, are regarded of the importance of maintaining peace and friendship between the United States and Japan and, knowing the high sense of justice and humanity of the American Nation, he looked confidently for an amicable settlement.

He also announced that the Government is introducing administrative reforms which would effect an economy of $35,000,000.

TO RACE ON LAKE MICHIGAN

Chicago, June 14.—Nearly thirty yachts of various sizes were scheduled to take the wind today in the Columbus Yacht club race across the lower end of Lake Michigan to Michigan City, Ind. Four boats in the schooner class were entered. Owners of smaller craft viewed weather conditions anxiously, fearing the larger boats would have a great advantage if a stiff breeze came up. Vandal, a 21 foot race boat, owned by Irving M. Orr, is the fastest boat entered.

Flag Day.

One hundred and thirty-six years ago today the Stars and Stripes were formally adopted as the flag of the United States, and throughout the Nation public celebrations of the anniversary are being held. In this city, through the efforts of the members of Portsmouth Lodge, B. P. O. E., the event is being observed in a far more elaborate manner than in any previous year. No grander lesson than patriotism is taught and in these days of strife, when the laboring classes in some of our mill cities are disposed to ignore it, both old and young should be taught to reverence Old Glory.

That Musgrove Appointment.

The reappointment of Frank A. Musgrove as state auditor by Governor Felker looks more like a piece of politics than a regard for the state's welfare. It was last January, while the deadlock over the choice of a United States senator was on, that the Courier predicted that Hollis would be elected senator and that the progressives, as a result of their playing into the hands of the democrats, would be allowed to cling to some of the good fat offices, mentioning specifically the office of state auditor. We received a long letter from Mr. Musgrove at that time, vigorously taking exceptions to our insinuations and declaring his intention even of resigning his office before his term had expired. Evidently, he thought better of it later. The prediction is now verified, too, by the reappointment. One cannot, perhaps, blame the democrats for feeling grateful to the progressives for their work in democratic behalf. But if there has been no definite trade, as is emphatically asserted, then it would seem as if Governor Felker might show his gratitude in some better way than by the reappointment to one of the fattest offices in the state of one who has not proven especially efficient in the office, if we may judge from common report.—Rochester Courier.

What's the Matter With the Boy?

We are giving considerable attention to our girls these days, investigating their wage with a view to ascertaining its relation to immorality and urging means for their protection. But the case of the boy seems to attract less notice. And one who is down town evenings must observe the number of lads who saunter about in groups, aimlessly, it would appear, finally drifting into the "movies" or the vaudeville houses, coming out in an hour or so ready for anything that promises amusement, because it is "too early to go home." They are being educated on the street and the education is in things that degrade. There are many things that the boys are doing today that are demoralizing and debasing them. There is much misdoing that the public never hears of, much sinning that is breaking mothers' hearts. There are many evils that the law does not and seemingly cannot prevent. Think of schoolboys who have already contracted the cocaine habit, and others whose stained fingers indicate constant use of cigarettes! How do children obtain these things, the sale of which is prohibited? What penalty is too severe for those who create and gratify such habits for the sake of gain?—Detroit Free Press.

The Basis of Peace.

The tide of hopeful feeling throughout Europe has run so strong and high during the past fortnight in connection with the celebration of the wedding of the German emperor's daughter that a certain reaction is pretty sure to follow. Yet there is much evidence that this feeling was justified, both by the celebration and the utterances of which it was the occasion and by the experience of the last six months. The experience has been significant and marvelous and such as no statesman of any country would have dared to predict. For more than half a century Turkey has been looked upon as the key to the peace of Europe, and any serious disturbance of its status was expected to lead to a general conflict. Turkey has practically been wiped out in Europe by a wholly unlooked-for coalition of her neighbors in the Balkans, but, though Europe has seemed to be on the verge of widespread war at least three times, peace has been preserved. And the recent utterances by the sovereigns in Berlin expressed at once confidence that peace would be kept and a definite purpose to maintain it. These are facts which we think justify the hopeful feeling that has prevailed.—New York Times.

For the Sterner Walks of Life.

Country life has its drawbacks, but it has its great advantages which overcome them. True, those who live in the country are "Rubes" and "Farmers" and "Hayseeds" to the cigarette smokers in town, but the boast of the business men in the world today is that they were born on the farm. Take away the surrounding evils that beset the young men and women on the threshold of life's journey in the city, and substitute the helpful influences of nature, and you fortify them for the sterner walks of life.

Exciting Moments In First Game of Big Polo Contest For International Championship.

Photos copyright, 1912, by American Press Association.

While simply wanted to find out where the girl was going.

When he jumped from the car he did not notice the revolver and heard him address the girl, and he was horrified when White began shooting. He knew that White was feeling bad because Miss Wade was with other fellows, but thought it was just pettiness.

The murdered girl is but sixteen years of age and an attractive looking girl. She has been employed for some time as nurse maid for an officer's family at the navy yard, and became acquainted with White there. He was very much infatuated with her, and had a habit of riding at 5 o'clock and walking around to this city to meet Miss Wade and accompany her across the river.

In the past week White has been gloomy and a few days ago inquired of the other men at the station as to the cost of a good revolver. He had purchased the revolver, a .38 calibre and apparently kept it in his room, for he went home for it last evening.

He has been stationed at this yard since the arrival of the U. S. S. Washington, being transferred from the cruiser to the wireless station.

He has been in the service for the past ten years and was rated as a chief electrician wireless operator. He was a quiet going fellow but inclined to be odd. As far as known he came from Baltimore but whether he has relatives is not known.

Medical Referee Sherburne will hold an inquest this forenoon.

THE SQUIRREL AND THE DOG

Curious Chain of Events Followed an Automobile Wreck

(New York Times)

In Central Park lived a squirrel. It was one of a fast disappearing family, whose life is made hideous by boys who, when the little animals come in the park wall to get the peanuts the more kindly disposed persons carry in their pockets, chase the little creatures and throw stones at them. A few youngsters have chased this squirrel yesterday just at the time, the squirrel and the dog chose for their meeting, and the little animal ran across the street and into the crowd that soon collected, from which it quickly sought safety through the open doorway of the hotel. It was not the first time that a squirrel had taken on a leap into the Plaza, but it was the first time one encountered a foe.

From the opening into the Fifty Ninth street cafe came most pleasant odors, and thither turned the squirrel, all unknowing that just now that thoroughfare was closed to little wild things such as he, with a great car-bomb on guard, who for an hour or more had been chattering a grudge against somebody because he was fed up there to a death, and with all those pleasant odors coming out not allowed to sample the good things that produced them.

Down the narrow lane frisked the squirrel. A deep throaty challenge came from a fierce looking bulldog, belonging to Miss Florence Malone of Brooklyn, who was taking luncheon inside with two friends. The squirrel turned. The dog sprang and the leash which was only on a slip, pulled out. The maid at the hat stand shrieked. A pageboy yelled. The few persons who were trying the new summer sofa cushions jumped over and rushed first in one direction and then in another, and one creditable witness avers that a woman jumped on a chair, and questioned everybody to know whether the thing was a rat or just a big mouse.

Around the lobby flew the squirrel, the dog after it. Unfortunately the little creature missed the advantage, the setter in the center would have given it and stuck to the floor. Just in front of the news stand the squirrel was caught, and then it showed fight. The dog trusted to its superior strength after the first grab and shake, dropped the little animal and the latter bit savagely at the dog's ear and actually took a small piece of it. The squirrel scratched the bulldog's face as it sprang at it again. There was one pitiful little squeak, and a dead squirrel lay by the news stand with a gory mouth stood staring down at it.

There are several societies that go to great lengths to protect dogs.

WILL RETIRE TODAY.

Washington, June 13.—Rear Admiral Hugo Osterhaus, ranking officer of the navy, next to Admiral Dwyer will close his active career tomorrow and go upon the retired list because he will be 62 years old—the age of compulsory retirement. He is a member of the general board and until last spring was commander of the Atlantic fleet. On the celebrated round the world cruise of the battleship fleet, he commanded the Connecticut, the late Fighting Bob Evans flagship.

His retirement brings up again the question of Captain Temple M. Potts and Commander Philip J. Andrews, whom Secretary Daniels recently refused to advance to the grade of rear admiral on the ground of insufficient sea service.

CURRENT OPINION

Social Service and the Public Schools.

The day is fast coming when just as surely as social service is an inseparable and honored part of both religious and medical institutions, so it shall be of our educational works. Phases of this service or movement closely allied to it, are already being slowly introduced into the public school systems of some cities, volunteer agencies are carrying on a more definite social service in close connection with the schools, and always a good teacher, interested to learn of the home surroundings of her pupils, is the most effective social worker the schools can have.

But when the effort is made to introduce direct social service into the school system itself a suspicion has often been felt on the part of the governing body, or on that of the taxpayer, that here is an attempt to turn the schools into charitable centers. They do not seem to realize that while it is all very well to talk about training the mind, no one has ever yet seen a mind that was not connected with a body. The obstacles which often prevent the mind's full development must be discovered and removed before the education the schools offer can be taken full advantage of. The public close relationship with hospital social service brings about with a patient's home must be established by the school with the homes of its pupils, so that any hindrance to a child's education existing there may be ascertained and as far as possible overcome. Much social service of a valuable kind has been carried on in connection with some of the special classes in the New York city schools by outside agencies devoted to the care of particular forms of physical defect, and their assistance to both teachers and pupils has been generous and effective. In some cases the closest relation has existed between these organizations and the school system, as in the case of the classes for cripples. But as yet none of this work has been made an actual part of the system, though its value is recognized and the volunteer service used to the fullest extent.—Eleanor Hope Johnson, in the Survey.

Two thousand tea cream cones were distributed among the school children. Governor Felker was taken to the Elks Home after the reception to meet the members of Portsmouth Lodge.

Mayor Badger spoke as follows: Exalted Ruler, Ladies and Gentlemen—As an Elk, I have been assigned by the Portsmouth Lodge a part in the ceremonies of Flag Day exercises (this afternoon); but before beginning the function to which I have been assigned, I desire to preface my remarks by speaking a few words, as Mayor, and thus extending to the distinguished visitors and guests who have honored us with their presence today, a most cordial and hearty welcome to the city of Portsmouth. The ladders of the city are out, and I assure them the hospitality and freedom of Portsmouth during their stay in our midst.

I think I voice the true sentiment of our people, when I say that the citizens of Portsmouth are especially glad to greet the gentlemen who occupied the highest civic office in the Commonwealth and who, by signing the Portsmouth armory bill made it possible and assured the building in the near future, of a long and much-needed public building in our city. I refer to the presence of His Excellency, the Governor of the State of New Hampshire.

The history of the American flag began with the landing of the Mayflower in 1620. The first colonial flag was known as the "King's Colors," combining the red and white crosses of England and Scotland upon an inner field of blue. During the memorable struggle of the colonists to establish themselves, various attempts were made to evolve a general flag emblematic of their cause, but nothing definite resulted. The animating sentiment of the fathers of the republic was that of freedom, and in support thereof the word "Liberty" was emblazoned upon many of the flags employed in those early days.

So great was the prejudice against England and the trappings of royalty that the use of the "King's Colors" became intermittent, and was finally discontinued. Similar prejudice developed against the crimson banner subsequently adopted by the Mother country, and known as the "Cromwell flag." In the year 1707 the colonists selected a red flag as their ensign, bearing in the upper corner the green symbol of a pine tree on a white field. This banner was in popular favor for many years, and is thought to have been the one carried by the Americans in the battle of Bunker Hill.

In 1775 a flag was designed for the Continental army and navy, showing thirteen alternate stripes of red and white, corresponding to the number of the colonies, with an azure field in the upper corner bearing the red cross of St. George and the white of St. Andrew. This was the beginning of the flag of stars and stripes. In this form it was hoisted by General George Washington over his headquarters at Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 1, 1776. The same pattern of flag was raised by Lieutenant John Paul Jones on his vessel, the "Alfred"—its first use on a man-of-war.

The right of freedom was proclaimed by the colonists on July 2, 1776, and, two days later, on July 4, the Declaration of Independence was adopted. In response to the demand for a banner more representative of the aims and ideals of the new country, on June 14, 1777, one hundred and thirty-six years ago today, Congress declared the national flag to be thirteen stripes, seven red and six white, with thirteen stars in a circle on a blue field.

According to most authorities the first flag of this description was made by Betsey Ross, at her home, No. 239 Arch street, Philadelphia, a building still preserved and pointed out as the birthplace of our national emblem.

George Washington, acting as committee man, submitted the design of the flag to Betsey Ross, and it was upon her suggestion that the stars were made of five points, as in France, instead of six points, as in England. In 1795, after Vermont and Kentucky had been admitted into the Union, two stripes and two stars were added to the flag. The war of 1812 was fought under such a flag, and it remained in this form until July 4, 1818, when the stripes were reduced to the original thirteen, and the stars increased to one for each state.

These changes also brought about a re-arrangement of the stars from the circular to the present group formation. For a time the constellation was depicted as one large star, thus suggesting the motto, "E Pluribus Unum."—"One formed of many." The red, white and blue colors in the flag were inherited from England and Scotland, and the stripes from Holland. The combination of stripes, colors and stars was an American idea. The red in the flag has been interpreted to mean defiance to all forms of tyranny and oppression, the white is indicative of purity and charity, while the blue represents justice and fidelity. In the American navy a special flag is displayed during the Sunday religious service—a square pennant of white, charged with a blue cross emblematic of faith, and this is the only flag that is permitted to fly above the stars and stripes within the proper jurisdiction of the American government.

In its present form, thirteen colonial stripes and one star for each state, the flag represents the American nation as it was at its birth, as it is at the present time, and betokens what it may be in the future when other stars shall have joined the constellation. In the sense that it has met unequal conditions and withstood them, that it has challenged unnumbered perils and conquered them, that it has encountered uncommon hardships and surmounted them, the American flag may be said to be of most heroic origin. The conflict in which it was born, and from which it rose to its present eminence, added more of luster to the annals of history and resulted in more of good to humankind than all of the tournaments, than all of the crusades, than all of the wars of the past.

At first an audacious piece of bunting, crudely woven and contradictory in design, it thrived and expanded until it gave to the world a new country, a new form of government, a new model of citizenship. To the language of flags it contributed a new word, that of "Liberty." It gave a new definition of home, a new ideal of the freeman, a truer conception of the brotherhood of man. Choosing as its primal task the subjugation of a vast wilderness, it became the chief geographer of the continent, the chief pilot of the seas, the chief trailmaker of the forest, the valley and the plain.

It must have been foreordained that this flag should lead all others in the flight of the centuries, for it was the flag of George Washington and Thomas Jefferson; of John Adams, Benjamin Franklin, and Patrick Henry; the flag of Betsy Ross, whose Quaker hands first fashioned it into a robe of glory. Inspired by souls like these, kindled at times like these, the spirit of '76 became the spirit of all the succeeding years, and the flag through which it spoke became the flag of Bunker Hill and Lady's Lane; of Buena Vista and Chancellorsville; the flag that cast its protecting shadow where rolls the Oregon; that blossomed and flamed in the snows of Alaska, and anchored a watchfire upon the islands of Hawaii; the same flag that romped with freedom in the bays of Manila and Santiago, and was planted in righteous defense upon the walls of China; the same flag that gashes rock-ribbed mountains and courses the oceans to mingle their waters; the first flag that was born to represent a people rather than monarch or a savage; the flag that has never known a surrender; the flag that is destined to win the world from wrong, to banish unholy strife, and to usher in the thousand years of peace.

On all the flags of history, this American flag is the greatest, the most beneficent, the most beautiful. Sporting in the breeze, it is a mosaic of ribboned loveliness; drooping in softer airs, its staff is transformed into a May-pole of festal delight. It is an honest flag, a benevolent flag, a righteous flag. Hail to this flag! "Wherever it flutters, the bride of the breeze, A message of freedom it flings o'er the seas, A hope for the world—and the heart that beats true Must leap at the sight of the Red, White and Blue."

Governor Felker's Address.
Governor Felker's remarks were as follows:

In the middle of the Civil war when patriotism was strained to its utmost, and there were symptoms of disloyalty here and there at the north, there appeared in the Atlantic Monthly an article called "The Man Without a Country." It purported to be the true story of a young man named Phillip Nolan, who had been implicated in the treason of Aaron Burr and had been brought to trial at the same time that Burr was tried. In the trial, on being asked if he wished to say anything to show that he had been true to the United States, he had cried out hastily that he had had enough of the United States and wished he might never hear of the United States again. The court ordered that he should have his wish and that for the remainder of his life he should be kept on one ship or another of the United States navy, under such restrictions that he should never hear a single word of his country. The story shows how now, and then, it happened that the idea of home and country was by accident forced upon him—and how he felt when it was.

For more than fifty years he never heard the name of the United States, and during all of that time he was indeed a man without a country. One afternoon this Phillip Nolan was seated upon the deck of the vessel and was asked to read aloud the "Lay of the Last Minstrel." No one in the circle knew a line of the poem, only that it was a tale of magic and border chivalry, of less than a thousand years ago.

Poor Nolan read on steadily through the fifty canto, stopped a minute, drank something and then began, without a thought of what was coming: "Breathes there the man, with soul so dead, Who never to himself hath said,—"

It seems impossible to us that anybody ever heard this for the first time; but all these fellows did then, and poor Nolan himself went on, still unconsciously or mechanically— "This is my own, my native land!"

Then they all say something was the matter; but he expected to get through, turned a little pale, and plunged on— "Whose heart hath never within him burned,

As home his footsteps he hath turned, From wandering on a foreign strand? If such there breathe, go, mark him well."

By this time the men were all beside themselves, wishing there was any way to make him turn over two pages; but he had not quite presence of mind for that; he gazed a little, colored crimson, and staggered on— "For him no minstrel raptures swell; Hilt though his tilts, proud his name, Boundless his wealth, as wish can claim, Despite these titles, power, and pelf, The wretch, concentered all in self— and here the poor fellow choked, could not go on, but staggered to his feet, swung the book into the sea, vanished into his stateroom, and was not seen again for two months.

On a later occasion the ship on which was Phillip Nolan overhauled a slaver and freed the slaves. Nolan was the only man who could talk Portuguese, which was the only European language the slaves understood. He told them they were free and should be set ashore at Cape Palmas. But this did not satisfy them and the captain asked Nolan why. Nolan interpreted: "He says 'Not Palmas.' He says 'Take us home; take us to our own country; take us to our own house; take us to our own people; and our own women.'" He says, he had an old father and mother who will die if they do not see him, and this one says he left his people all sick and that he was caught in the sight of home. And this one says, choked out Nolan, "that he has not heard a word from his home in six months while he has been locked up in an infernal barracoon." Even the negroes themselves stopped howling as they saw Nolan's agony, and the Captain's almost equal distress of sympathy.

"As we leaned back in the stern and the men gave way," says the one who tells the story, "he said to me, 'Youngster, let them show you what it is to be without a family, without a home, and without a country. And if you are ever tempted to say a word or to do a thing that shall put a bar between you and your family, your home, and your country, pray God in His mercy to take you that instant home to His heaven. Stick by your family, boy; forget that you have a self, while you do everything for them. Think of your home, boy; write and send, and talk about it. Let it be nearer and nearer to your thoughts, the farther you have to travel from it, and rush back to it when you are free, as that poor black slave is doing now. And for your country, boy, and the words rattled in his throat, and for that flag' and he pointed to the ship, 'never dream a dream but of serving her as she bids you, though the service carries you through a thousand hells. No matter what happens to you, no matter who flatters you, or who blames you, never look at another flag; never let a night pass but you pray God to bless that flag. Remember, boy, that behind all these men you have to do with, behind officers, and government, and people even, there is the country herself, your country, and that you belong to her as you belong to your own mother. Stand by her, boy, as you would stand by your mother. If those deaths there had gut hold of her today! I was frightened to death by his calm hard passion, but I blundered out that I would by all that was holy, and that I had never thought of doing anything else.' He hardly seemed to hear me, but he said, almost in a whisper, 'O if anybody had said so to me when I was of your age!'"

Patriotism, as understood by the ancients, is but a partial virtue. When it is most intense, it is most narrow and intolerant. Passionate devotion to country was rarely separated from hatred of the foreigner, anyone who was not a citizen was deemed to be a slave or an enemy. They reckoned citizenship as the highest attribute of humanity. They placed the state above the individual, and no man could rise higher than to membership in the state. But with us the state only affords the means of obtaining a still higher object, the fullest possible development of the human family, both in this world and in the world to come. Love of country, like all love, springs from a desire for life, for higher, richer life. In proportion as the laws and spirit of government give us this additional, richer life, do we love the country.

America today represents the general tendency and sentiment of the modern age more than any other country. No other country is so attractive, no other furnishes such opportunities, and no other offers such great civil and religious liberty. The American's loyalty to his country should be first loyalty to truth, to justice, and to humanity.

The compact made on the Mayflower shows the spirit with which America was settled and by which she has been guided during all these years. "We, whose names are hereunto written do by these presents promise and mutually, in the presence of God and of one another, covenant and combine ourselves together into a civil body politic, and by virtue thereof to enact constitutions and frame such just and equal laws, ordinances, acts, constitutions, officers, from time to time as shall be thought most necessary and convenient for the general good of the Colony, under which we promise all the submission and obedience." This was human freedom, human brotherhood, the supremacy of law over will, the divine right of man to govern himself.

For more than one hundred and fifty years they worked out their manifest destiny for self-government under the British flag.

Today we celebrate the hundred and thirty-sixth birthday of our American flag. The separation of the colonists from the mother country was not due to its constitution, its form of government, or to its flag, but rather to the administration of Lord North. Our early colonists were loth to sever their relations with the government of Great Britain, and expected to reaffirm their allegiance after the difficulties with the home government had been adjusted. It was not until June 14, 1777, one hundred and thirty-six years ago today, that the Continental congress ordered the combined crosses of Saint George and Saint Andrew stricken from the flag.

There are two flags of especial interest to the people of New Hampshire now adorning the hall of the New Hampshire Historical Society, presented to that society by Mr. Edward Tuck who has done so much for Dartmouth college, for the New Hampshire Historical Society, and for various interests in your own county. These flags were presented to the second New Hampshire regiment by the Committee of Safety, and they cost at that time thirty pounds. They were captured from our troops at Fort Ann, July 8, 1777, by the 9th Regiment of foot, under the command of Lieutenant Hill, but only after the ammunition of the New Hampshire regiment was exhausted, and without stigma upon the part of the New Hampshire regiment. After Burgoyne's surrender the officers were allowed to retain their personal baggage and Col. Hill carried these flags to England where they remained until they were obtained by Mr. Tuck and presented to the Historical society. The flags are of silk. They measure five feet on the staff, five feet six inches on the fly, one being a light gray-blue, the other buff. The blue flag has in its center a small red shield with one star on either side, and on the shield are the letters N. H. and directly beneath "Second Regiment," in two lines. On the shield is the motto "The Glory, not the Prey." In the other corner next to the staff are two small superimposed crosses representing the Union Jack. The buff flag bears in its center a shield with thirteen rays and thirteen lines radiating from it. Each of the thirteen lines touches one of the thirteen interlocking links. The disk or shield bears the motto, "We are one." Each one of the thirteen links contains the name of one of the thirteen original states, that of New Hampshire being at the top. In the upper corner next to the staff are eight triangles, alternating red and light blue so arranged as to form two crosses, one upright and the other diagonal.

What a change has taken place during the hundred and thirty-six years' absence of these flags from the state. During the winter following, Washington with his little band went into winter quarters at Valley Forge. That was the darkest period of the revolution, and as the historian has said, "You might have tracked the little army to its winter quarters in Pennsylvania by the blood of their feet marching barefooted over the frozen ground."

Then there was scarcely a population of three million, now we have one hundred million; then scarcely more than four fifths of a million square miles of territory, while now we have more than three and a half million square miles.

The stars of the flag have been increased from thirteen to forty-eight and not one has been obliterated during all these years. It has fought seven wars and has been victorious in them all. As the result of two, that with Mexico and that with Spain, the territory of the United States was greatly increased.

In that greatest struggle of history, between the North and South, it fought for the preservation of the country and for national unity, and the conqueror and the conquered, with equal love of the old flag later went forth side by side to victory in the war with Spain. It has accomplished more for unity, more for the upbuilding of the race, more for its material prosperity and more for its aggrandizement by peaceful methods and by purchase than has been accomplished by war. In 1803 we obtained the Louisiana purchase from Napoleon containing more than one million square miles of territory. In 1819 we acquired Florida from Spain; Texas was annexed as an independent state in 1845 and in addition by purchase from Mexico in 1853; and by treaty with England we acquired the great Oregon territory in 1846; and the great empire of Alaska was obtained from Russia in 1867; and the Sandwich Islands were annexed in 1898. Over all this grand and magnificent area, flouts the stars and stripes, as the flag of a united people.

The flag went with Perry when he opened up Japan to civilization in 1854; it went with Henry to the north pole and is now planted at the apex of the earth. It has followed our commercial enterprises into every sea

DREADNAUGHT TO BE BUILT AT NEW YORK YARD

Washington, June 13.—Orders have been issued by the Secretary of the Navy to the Bureau of Construction and Repair and Steam Engineering to proceed with the construction of battleship No. 39, which is in essential particulars, a duplicate of the Pennsylvania, recently laid down by the Newport News Shipbuilding & Drydock Company. No. 39 will be built at the New York Navy Yard. Secretary Daniels' action sets a new high record in the value of new construction work at the United States navy yards as the value on July 1 will be $11,453,590.

The value of new construction work at the various navy yards on July 1 for the last ten years is as follows: 1903, $4,975,400; 1904, $3,042,220; 1905, $4,018,580; 1906, $3,008,350; 1907, $2,919,550; 1908, $776,950; 1909, $5,166,026; 1910, $1,956,800; 1911, $7,851,000; and 1912, $3,800,400. The new vessel will be the fourth battleship to be built in a Government navy yard. The other battleships, all built at New York, are the Connecticut and Florida, with the New York yet under construction. The total value of vessels built and building in the yards during this decade is $33,195,000. Aside from the four battleships at the New York yard there have been built in either the New York or Mare Island yard the cruisers Vestal, Prometheus and Juniter, the fleet oil tankers Kanawha and Maumee, the training vessels Cumberland Intrepid and Dexter, the gunboats Monocacy and Palis and half a dozen tugs.

Secretary Daniels has ordered the immediate assembling of material for the Pennsylvania and the laying of the keel at the earliest possible moment. This will be the first big vessel to be constructed under the present Administration and Secretary Daniels is anxious to establish a new speed record, such as will closely compete with the rapidity with which German and British warships are constructed. Although the Pennsylvania will require three years in buildings at the Newport News Shipbuilding Yard, Secretary Daniels expects to get No. 39 into service a month or two short of that time. The quickest time in which any other American battleship has been produced was thirty-four months and that was one of the early dreadnaughts.

No. 39 and the Pennsylvania probably will prove the limit in dimensions of warship construction by this or any other country, an account of the limitations of the Panama Canal. The ships will be 608 feet in length, with a beam of 97 feet, a draught of 28 feet and 10 inches and a displacement of 31,400 tons. A speed of twenty-two knots is required. The batteries will consist of twelve 14-inch guns in four turrets, four submerged torpedo tubes and twenty-two 5-inch rapid fire guns. The complement is 950 officers and men. The machinery will consist of high power turbines, the Curtis type in the Pennsylvania and the Parsons type in No. 39, each with smaller cruising turbines geared to the propellers.

have been living in the Jamel mansion corner of One Hundred and Sixtieth street and Edgecombe avenue, where they have been acting as caretakers. Commissioner Stover of the Park department filed to arrange with the Grand Army of the Republic of which both Mr. and Mrs. Brownell are members to take care of them in some institution for the rest of their lives. The difficulty was that the organization has not had to consider a similar case before as Mrs. Brownell is the only woman to hold membership in it, and was unable to meet this exceptional case. She has therefore been moved to the asylum for the insane on Ward's island.

There is no more picturesque figure in romance than that of the woman, whose dauntless spirit is now clouded and whose energies are failing. Her military career may be said to have begun with her birth on a battlefield, when her father, Colonel George Southwell, was stationed in California, South Africa. One day there was fighting near the station and the Colonel's wife drove out with some friends to witness it from a distance. While they were there Mrs. Southwell was taken ill and an army tent was pitched for her accommodation. There this little girl was born. In accordance with an agreement made between Col. Southwell and another officer, his most intimate friend, Sir James Kady to the effect that which ever should first have a child should name it for the other and the little girl was named Kady.

The mother of Kady died a few days later, an army tent not being the best place in the world for her at that time, but the child was sturdy and lived to go home with her father when he got leave to return to England. After a time he was ordered back to Africa and the little girl came to the United States with another friend of her father's, Cameron McKenzie. While living in Central Falls, R. I., she met and married Mr. Brownell, she being then barely 18 years old. Three days after her marriage the war broke out and her husband, who was one of the charter members of the Mechanics Rifles of Providence was summoned to go to the front.

Things moved rapidly in those days. Mr. Brownell had taken his bride to see his mother in Providence, and while they were there he was summoned to attend a meeting of his company. More than 200 men were present, and when those were asked to step forward who had nothing to keep them at home every man but one responded and he was thrown down stairs for his prudence. The young bridegroom was not that one. He went home and broke then news that he was going to the war. She did not weep nor beseech him to stay at home. Was she not a soldier's daughter and had she not been born while a battle was raging? What she said was that she too would go to the front and fight beside her husband.

In vain he protested that an army camp was no place for a beautiful young woman and explained that all sorts and conditions of men in the army would make it dangerous and unpleasant for her. She was willing to accept the conditions and felt confident of her power to be true to herself there as in that shelter of her own home. In the course of their argument she gave utterance to the statement that has been so often quoted—"If a woman wants to she can be a good woman in hell."

After the three months term for which the Brownells were enlisted, had expired they reenlisted and now service with the Fourth Rhode Island regiment. On one occasion Mrs. Brownell distinguished herself by running into the open and waving a flag to warn the Fifty Rhode Island that it was firing at friends, it having mistaken the Fourth Rhode Island for the enemy in the smoke and haze.

Both Mrs. Brownell and her husband were wounded during the war, the latter seriously. In 1884 Congress passed an act granting her a special pension. Since 1905 she has been employed by the department of parks having first had charge of one of the buildings in Central park and later having been transferred to the Jumel mansion which is owned by the city.

Because of his wound, Mr. Brownell has never been able to do very hard work, although he had for a time a position in the department of highways. Mrs. Brownell has been th active one, and after she broke down, those two old soldiers were like children together. In the little room of the famous old mansion set apart for the use of the custodian a competent nurse took care of them. It would have been better if she could have kept the woman veteran in bed, as she tried to do in the little room up under the roof, full of pictures and clippings of the war days, but as soon as her husband left she became restless and insisted upon following him. However incoherent may have been her language in general way, there was always one word that stood out distinctly "Robert." As she would not be separated from him when he went to war, so in those days of their broken strength she clung to him and wanted to be where he was.

GETS PIECE OF NASHVILLE'S KEEL

Colonel Albert W. Swain, American Consul at Southampton, has received as a gift a piece of the original keel of the Confederate cruiser Nashville, which was refitted at Southampton many times during the Civil War. Mr. Swain will present the relic to some Southern society. The Nashville was one of the most successful of the Confederate blockade runners in the first two years of the Civil War. Owing to the blockade maintained on the Southern coast by the United States navy, the Nashville remained in the Ogeechee River, near Osaubaw Sound, and not far from Fort McAllister, or the Georgia coast for several months. Her position was discovered by the monitor Montauk, and on Feb. 25, 1863, there was a duel in a fog between the two vessels. The Nashville was hemmed in by piling that had been driven in the mouth of the river and in the course of her manoeuvres ran aground. After a brisk exchange of shots with the Montauk, which was commanded by Commander Worden, the Nashville, took fire and soon blew up. When the Montauk was retreating a torpedo blew a hole in her bottom, but she was repaired and remained on the station. The Nashville was commanded by Captain Baker. She was simply a blockade runner at first, but was fitted as a cruiser later.

DISCOURAGEMENT FOR EMIGRANTS

Irish emigration agents, and steamship companies that make a special feature of carrying steerage passengers to the United States will have no reason to thank James O'Hara of Los Angeles, who has written home advising his countrymen and women to avoid California, as they would a plague spot. The antiemigration society and other bodies throughout the land who think it is a part of their work to caution young people against the many pitfalls of emigration, have taken advantage of O'Hara's communication and given it publicity which he never anticipated.

Circulars in thousands have been printed containing the full text of the letter and these have been distributed at hundreds of church and chapel doors throughout the south and west of Ireland. The effect has been electrical. At Ballina, in Mayo, which has been for quite a number of years one of the busiest emigration centers in Connaught, the local agent of the steamship companies reports that out of 45 passengers booked for the month of April 11 have materialized, while a Siles agent has a similar story to tell. Many who still suffer from the emigrating craze are now making their way to Canada and Australia, when under more favorable conditions, they would go to the United States.

FIERCEST BATTLE FOR YEARS IN THE PHILIPPINES

Washington, June 13.—"Probably no fiercer battle since American occupation" is the description by Brig. Gen. Pershing of the battle with the Moros yesterday at Baggas, in his report by cable today to the War Department.

The Moros made desperate attempts to rush the American lines, but were finally beaten back and overwhelmed. Their leader, Amil, and several other noted outlaws, were reported killed, but the total loss of the Moros is not known.

One American officer, Taylor A. Nichols of the Philippine scouts, was killed, 1st Lieut. Edwin H. Rackley, Philippine scouts, was slightly wounded and three Philippine scouts of the 51st Company, all natives, were killed. Gen. Pershing's report was as follows:

"On June 12 the Moros' resistance at Baggas was formidable, and their fort and trenches on the precipitous side of the crater not only supported each other strongly, but were defended with modern arms. The Moros fanatically and continuously tried to rush the American lines, but the careful disposition of our force held the American loss to a minimum. Probably there has been no fiercer battle since American occupation."

"Major George C. Shaw of the Philippine Scouts commanded the right wing, with Co. M, 8th Regiment, United States Infantry, and 40th Company, Philippine Scouts. Capt. Taylor, 1st A. Nichols of the Philippine Scouts commanded the left wing, with the 31st and 29th Companies, Philippine Scouts. A mounted gun was with each wing, and proved of great assistance."

"At the close of yesterday, Capt. Patrick Meylan of the Philippine Scouts, with two companies, was supporting the gun on Mt. Itunga, and the American force occupied a controlling position on the rim of the crater."

"First Lieut. Edwin H. Rackley, Philippine Scouts, was slightly wounded and three Moro scouts of the 51st Company were killed. Capt. Taylor A. Nichols was killed in the early morning fight, and is a serious loss to the army. Amil and several leading outlaws reported killed. Other Moro losses still unknown."

TO ADJUST THE VEIL.

If one goes about adjusting the veil on the tiny hat in the ordinary way the hair will be plastered against the face in the most depressing fashion. Veils must be very carefully adjusted to small-brimmed hats or hats with no brims at all.

The lower edge of the veil must be pinned around the throat and fastened

Just enough fullness should be left to reach to the hat, where the veil should be pinned in place, and as it is drawn up the hair will be pressed upward, with it in a surprisingly good effect.

New York Gets Big Ships To Build

Orders have been issued by Secretary Daniels that battleship 39, authorized by the last congress shall be built at the New York navy yard. The new vessel will be about the size of the Pennsylvania.

We Figure Here Somewhere

Information has reached the Mare Island navy yard that the award of the destroyer Melville has not yet been made and the department still has the various bids under consideration.

It was noted shortly after the bids were opened that the New York Shipbuilding Co., would be given the work, but in the light of later information this is not necessarily the case.

Mare Island bid is said to be the lowest of the navy yard bids and probably of the private bids and there is yet the element of a chance that Mare Island may have a third big ship to build.—Valley Chronicle.

Report That He Will Resign

It was said that executive officer Burns of the U. S. S. Dos Moines will shortly tender his resignation to the Secretary of the Navy.

Another Kick on the System

The workmen at the Mare Island yard appear to be against the Halsey system and a letter from the Trades Council of the Pacific has brought the following letter to Congressmen Carry from the Secretary of the Navy.

My Dear Mr. Curry:—Your letter of May 22, forwarding a telegram from the Valley Trades and Labor Council in regard to introducing the Halsey premium system in the sheet metal shop at the Mare Island navy yard has been received.

In reply I use in the last shop, flag shop and would say that this system is now in full effect at that yard and is much liked by the employees, who after a short trial of the same, unanimously asked to have it permanently installed.

It is believed that this system is beneficial to both the workmen and the government when properly controlled.

I was lately decided to extend this system to the sheet metal shop, but only with the consent of the workmen, the Commandant being especially instructed that the consent of the men must be obtained before any attempt is made to install the system, and unless acceptable to the workmen it will be put out of operation.

Very sincerely yours,
(Signed) JOSEPHUS DANIELS,
Secretary of the Navy.

and is with us in the building of that great undertaking of modern days, the Panama Canal.

No one can injure us except ourselves. There is no reason for those who trample the flag in the dust or refuse to carry it; there is no room for the red flag inscribed "No God, and no Master." The stars and stripes is the most beautiful flag that floats. It symbolizes all that is grand and ennobling. It tells not only of glory and honor, but of material prosperity. It is a sacred standard of the republic because no human being can stand beneath its folds without becoming and remaining free.
